

Library Instruction for English Classes

Library instruction is available for students in any of the English department courses. To schedule a library instruction, please e-mail the English librarian, Gayla Byerly, at gbyerly@library.unt.edu. Please include the following information in your email:

- A couple of dates that you prefer for library orientation
- The time and days that your class meets
- The number of students in your class
- Any accommodations needed for students

Gayla will reply with the date and time for your class's instruction. The class will meet in the Willis Library Learning Center, which is the computer room just inside the library's doors immediately to your left. Gayla will create a handout for your class, as well as a web page. Here is a sample web page: <http://www.library.unt.edu/classes/english/template2004.htm>

The basic library orientation includes the following points:

- Finding reference help
- Locating all of UNT's libraries
- Using the online catalog
- Reading the online catalog
- Finding books
- Searching a database
- Learning what the citations mean
- Learning how to find cited journals in the catalog
- Learning where journals are located
- Learning how to find items not in the catalog
- Learning how to print, download, or e-mail citations
- Finding the microforms
- Finding the reference books
- Using Remote Storage
- Using Interlibrary Loan
- Using Tex Share
- Connecting to the library from home
- Using electronic citation guides

Gayla will tailor your library instruction to your preferences.
